Deep-ocean circulation during MIC 5e loses buoyancy in a fashion similar to the Holocene; however, maximum flow velocities are curtailed for ~7 kyr after the onset of interglacial conditions. This lag is best explained by the melting of Greenland into areas of NCW convection due to increased insolation forcing.

Dye tracing is tracking and tracing various flows using dye added to the liquid in question. That is, it uses dye as a flow tracer. The purpose of tracking may be an analysis of the flow itself, of the transport of something by the flow of the objects that convey the flow.

That odd, torpedo-like device hanging a hundred feet or so below the belly of a low-flying helicopter is no armament, but a new technology that scientists hope will aid in the tracking of underground water flows.

Deep-Water Flow in the Mariana and Caroline Basins * ... track in that basin. At somewhat shallower levels, deep water is able to cross the ridge from the East Mariana Basin to the West Mariana and Philippine Basins at the Yap Mariana Junction (YMJ), which lies to the southwest of Guam and at the southern end of the Izu-Ogasawara-Mariana Ridge (IOMR). The bottom property distributions of ...

2 The shoe track barriers did not isolate the hydrocarbons. Having entered the wellbore annulus, hydrocarbons passed down the wellbore and entered the 9 7/8 in. x 7 in. production casing through the shoe track, installed in the bottom of the casing. Flow entered into the casing rather than the casing annulus. For this to happen, both barriers in the shoe track must have failed to prevent ...

Full simulation of deep water spill is difficult and complicated because spilled material consists of many hydrocarbons and it is complex multi-phase flow. As the first step of numerical prediction for spill, the methane gas and oil drop
