Ernest Hemingway "A Natural History of the Dead" IT has always seemed to me that the war has been omitted as a field for the observations of the naturalist. We have charming and sound accounts of the flora and fauna of Patagonia by the late W. H. Hudson, the Reverend Gilbert White has written most interestingly of the Hoopoe on its occasional and not at all common visits to Selborne, and ...

moral character, and possible utility to man. Because natural history was perceived to be intrinsically interesting children, books about it were ideal didactic instruments. The educational theories of John Locke, at once more pragmatic and more humane than their predecessors, had redefined the function of early education. Books were to entice children to learn rather than to force them ...
